Fannie over to her sister's that evening, and her lover's disappointment and her father's chagrin, was quite mystified at his daughter's conduct.

"Only to think, Mary," said Fannie, as she drew a chair up to the table where her sister was sitting, "that Charles Ray has asked papa's permission to visit me."

"Well, it's just what I expected," replied Mary, quietly.

NOTICE.—In making up our form for the inside of the Daily News yesterday, a few lines were left out of the story which was commenced on the first page; thus destroying the connection in the paragraph which ran over to the second page, in order to rectify which we republish that part of the story which was in yesterday's paper, and shall conclude the same in tomorrow's issue.

Bayard Taylor tells the following story in his last contribution to the N. Y. Mercury: and it has a moral which young poets—and prosers too—may remember with profit.

"I had in my knapsack a manuscript poem of some twelve hundred lines, called 'The Littered Titan'—the idea of which, I fancied to be something entirely new in literature. Perhaps it was. I did not doubt, for a moment, that any London publisher would gladly accept it; and I imagined that its appearance would create not a little sensation. Mr. Murry gave the poem to his literary adviser, who kept it about a month, and then returned it, with a polite message. I was advised to try Moxon; but, by this time, I had sobered down considerably, and did not wish to risk a second rejection. I therefore solaced myself by reading the immortal poem at night, in my bare chamber, looking occasionally down into the grave-yard, and thinking of mute, in-glorious Milton. The curious reader may ask how I escaped the catastrophe of publishing the poem, at last. That is a piece of good fortune for which I am indebted to the Rev. Dr. Bushnell, of Hartford. We were fellow-passengers on board the same ship to America, a few weeks later; and I had sufficient confidence in his taste to show him the poem. His verdict was charitable; he asserted that no poem of that length should be given to the world before it had received the most thorough study and finish—and excused me from a promise not to publish it within a year. At the end of that time, I renewed the promise to myself, for a thousand years."

Christianity as an Element of Progress.

There is no need of entering at present into any argument on the comparative character of our agricultural and manufacturing population. But this is certain, and it is obvious to all eyes, that with great intelligence, and many estimable qualities, there is among the latter moral evil, which never can be cured by a merely secular education. Let us not deceive ourselves by believing that the people of any great commercial country will ever be able to guide themselves safely by cultivated intellect. Christianity alone is the strength of the State. If the Bible be neglected—we must not say neglected—but if it be laid aside merely for Sabbath hours, and those perhaps unfrequent, interrupted, and inspired by no very devout spirit—and all other kinds of knowledge elevated to a higher place in men's opinions than "saving knowledge"—paucity-given by the most eloquent in the land, as the foundation on which the pillars of a nation's prosperity rest; so that a man belonging to the working classes comes to value himself chiefly on account of the acquisitions he has made, perhaps, in some branch of physical science or art—if, by insensible degrees, religion comes to be considered by the poor man as a thing of secondary importance—and it is not easy to see how that can be otherwise, if his whole mind, during his leisure hours, is to be applied with all its faculties and feelings, to knowledge lying out of the sphere of religion—the education, so far from being a blessing, will be a bane, and that which men call light will be darkness. Symptoms of some approaching evil like this are visible in the aspect of the times. Those who think that human nature is sufficient in itself for its own earthly destiny, and would rather wish to keep religion, that is, Christianity, in the background, will give a different interpretation of these signs. This we will say, that no man who desires to promote the interests of his fellow-creatures, will scruple to declare his faith, and to uphold it, from the fear, in this liberal and enlightened age, as we are proud to call it, of being thought a bigot, and no philosopher. It is the biased nature of our religion, that it teaches to the uneducated that which lies beyond the faculties of the wisest of the sons of men. The meek and humble cottager, who has seen only that small segment of the visible creation that is bounded by the hills encircling his native valley, and who has read few books but One, knows more in his simple heart of perfect morality, than the highest mind that ever trusted entirely to the illumination of its own reason.—Prof. Wilson's Essays.

LOCAL INTELLIGENCE.

We would call the attention of our readers to the advertisement in another column, of the Shore Line Railroad from Boston to New York, connecting with this city by the steamer Jenny Lind to East Greenwich, thence to New York, via Stonington, New London and New Haven. This arrangement, as will be seen by reference to the advertisement, commences on Monday next, so that passengers leaving this city at 8 A. M., will arrive in New York at 4.20 P. M.

We learn from one of the officers of the Road, that the Company have had new cars made for the Express train which connects with the boat to this city, so that passengers can take seats at East Greenwich and be conveyed to New York, without changing cars, arriving in New York some two hours in advance of any other train.

The company have had two very substantial boats built for the ferries at New London and Connecticut River, and at the latter place they have made ample arrangements on their boat to furnish passengers with as good a dinner as can be found at any hotel in New England.

This line, we understand, is becoming quite popular with the travelling public, and promises to be the most popular railroad line between Boston and New York.

A poor woman planted some flowers around the grave of a deceased friend in the Old Cemetery in this city, and some unwhipped scoundrel has wantonly destroyed them. If this paragraph should meet his eye, he will please understand us as considering him, and all others addicted to such practices, as only worthy of being buried in a dunghill, with the following epitaph chalked on a shingle over his grave:

Here lies a Vandal only fit
To be interred in this hole;
With soul as black as ink he's gone
To answer for the deeds he's done.

GENERAL ASSEMBLY.

TUESDAY EVENING, May 31.

IN GRAND COMMITTEE.

The question as to Attorney General was allowed to lie on the table.

The Governor was then engaged.

Ex-Governor Dyer, on returning from the Chair, spoke as follows:

Governor Turner.—The hour having arrived in which I am to resign, and you are to assume the duties of the Executive of this State, the emotions it calls forth are of a disagreeable, and yet painful nature. Agreeable, that I have the pleasure of congratulating a personal friend as being the recipient of a distinguished honor, painful (at the pleasant relations existing with the gentlemen associated with me in the discharge of my duties are now severed forever.

It would be my duty, sir, as I welcome you to your honored position, to direct you to the source of all Wisdom and Power, for your guidance in the performance of your many and varied duties devolving upon you. But the suggestions are unnecessary, as you have already acknowledged the ruling Providence of Almighty God. I can, however, add most sincerely by do I invoke His blessing upon you, that through your administration this my native and beloved State may be made progressive in an honorable career.

And to you, gentlemen of the Senate and the House, I wish to express my sincere trust that you will receive two years' service from my fellow citizens. I am conscious of the imperfections of my administration. But the pledge of my inauguration has been redeemed. The duties of the Executive have been faithfully, fearlessly, and impartially discharged to the best of my abilities.

I bid you, gentlemen, a respectful and a grateful farewell, as I now introduce to you His Excellency Thomas G. Turner, of Warren, Governor of the State for the ensuing year.

To these remarks, Governor Turner responded as follows:

Governor Dyer.—You will please accept my acknowledgments for this expression of your kind feelings towards myself, and be assured, sir, they are fully reciprocated on my part.

I am now about to enter upon the duties of the office which has been filled by you, sir, for the last two years, with so much honor to yourself, and to the State. Although our State is small, the duties of its Governor are, as you have remarked, many and various. I have no expectation that in the performance of them, I shall be able to entirely satisfy myself and all my constituents, but my earnest endeavor shall be, with the help of Him, whom, only, I acknowledge as Master, to perform them in a manner that shall conform to the will and best interest of all of the people of the State, and of that close of my official term I will retire from office, observing and enjoying the confidence and regards of my fellow citizens, in the same degree that I know you, sir, do on your retirement, I shall be fully satisfied. Allow me, sir, to congratulate you upon the success of your administration, and to express the hope that you may, on being relieved from your official cares, be entirely restored to health, and that you may enjoy all the blessings attendant upon the consciousness of having conscientiously performed all the duties imposed upon you by your fellow citizens.

Gentlemen of the Senate and House of Representatives: In assuming the duties of presiding officer of this honorable body, I am conscious that I shall often need your kind indulgence and forbearance towards the errors that will arise from my inexperience.

It shall be my constant endeavor to perform the duties with courtesy and strict impartiality, and feel confident that I shall have your hearty co-operation in all my endeavors to preserve the dignity and decorum of this body.

DELICATE CAKE.—Half a cup of butter, the white of four eggs, one cup and a half of sugar, one teaspoonful of soda, two cups of flour, one teaspoonful of cream of tartar, one half cup of sweet milk. Use any spice you choose.

LEMON CHEESE CAKE.—One pound of sugar broken small; six eggs, leaving out the whites of two; the juice of three lemons, and the rinds of two grated, and one-fourth of a pound of fresh butter. Put these ingredients into a pan, and boil them gently over a slow fire, until it is as thick as honey. Pour it into a small jar, and tie down with brandy paper.

PICKLED EGGS.—Boil the eggs until very hard; when cold, shell them, and cut them in halves lengthways. Lay them carefully in large mouthed jars, and pour over them scalded vinegar, well seasoned with whole pepper, allspice, a few pieces of ginger, and a few cloves or garlic. When cold, tie up closely, and let them stand a month. They are then fit for use. With cold meat, they are a most delicious and delicate pickle.

REVENUE VANDERBILT'S DAMAGE.—A lecture will be delivered at Aquidneck Hall, this [Friday] evening, on "the properties of the atmosphere, and the means of preventing contagious diseases," by Mr. Zuthill, a gentleman who is favorably known as a lecturer on these subjects.

OVER THE RIVER.

Over the river, they hearken to me—
Loved ones 'neath the stars to the further side!
The gleam of their snowy robes I see,
But their voices are drowned in the rushing tide.

There's one with ringlets of sunny gold,
And eyes, the reflection of heaven's own blue;
He crossed in twilight, grey and cold,
And the pale mist hid him from mortal view.

We saw not the angels who met him there;
The gate of the city we could not see;
Over the river, over the river,
My brother stands waiting to welcome me!

Over the river the boatman pale
Carried another—the household pet—
Her brown curls waved in the gentle gale—
Daring Minnie! I see her yet.

She crossed on her bosom her dimpled hands,
And fearlessly entered the phantom bark;
We watched it glide from the silver sands,
And all our sunshine grew strangely dark.

We know she is safe on the further side,
Where all the ransomed and angels be;
Over the river, the mystic river,
My childhood's idol is waiting for me.

For none cross from those quiet shores,
Who cross with the boatman cold and pale;
We have the dim of the golden oars,
And enter, a gleam of the snowy sail—
And lo! they have passed from our yearning hearts!

They crossed the stream, and are gone for aye,
We may not under the veil apart,
That hides from our vision the gates of day!

We only know that their bark no more
May sail with us o'er life's stormy sea;
Yet somewhere, I know, on the unseen shore,
They watch, and bespeak, and wait for me.

And I sit and think, when the sunset's gold
Is hushing river and hill and shore,
I shall one day stand by the water cold,
And list for the sound of the boatman's oar;

I shall watch for a gleam of the flapping sail;
I shall hear the boat as it gains the strand;
I shall pass from sight with the boatman pale
To the better shore of the spirit land;

I shall know the loved who have gone before,
And joyfully sweet will the meeting be,
When over the river, the peaceful river,
The Angel of Death shall carry me.
